GRANGE DEPARTMENT

mmmmm A Model Grange.

By request, we attended Glenwood Grange, May 20th, in Rush county, to give them a little talk. We were most cordially received and welcomed to their hall, which is a model in many respects. They were out in a pretty full attendance. They opened in due form and proceeded with their business with promptness and dispatch. This grange each meeting selects a question for discussion at the next meeting. The subject for this meeting was, "Is salt injurious to hogs."-Broth er Noble affirming. But the question was laid over to another time, in order to give us more time to talk, notwithstanding our protest. We were auxious to hear from our brother, but in vain.

This is as it should be in every grange. Discuss from time to time questions relating to farm interests. have never spent a more pleasant afternoon than with this grange, and we would predict still greater results from our Order, if all the granges could be brought up to the same working condition. They passed, during the session, a box, into which almost every one threw a slip of paper, and then as one by one these strips were drawn from the box and read, the most lively interest was manifested. Some were questions, demanding an answer from some brother or sister present; other pertinent suggestions and tit bits of the tiller of the soil, Agriculture is the everything, both grave and amusing. We enjoyed it hugely. Long may Glenwood Grange continue their work: gather in the young folks, and mutually benefit all.—Ex.

The Turnip.

Ask an Englishman what erop has W. J. Anusrnova, survr., etc., } Fi. Fa. been most instrumental in building up the agriculture of the tight little island, haps, so great returns from this crop ; for sheep raisers, however, who practice feeding turnips largely during the cold months, and with uniform success. Their nearly all produced from turnips and al. vs. D. D. Cohen, et al., in the Chancery straw; and, so far as we know, the animals mature quite as early as our American, grain-fed beet.

· Though horizontal farming, as Dr. Loring defines root culture, is expensive of labor and backaches, yet we are quite certain that more machine labor may be economically employed in root raising. The expense of cultivation has been the great drawback to the extensive growing of the turnip in this country. Yankee Ingenuity ought to remedy this difficulty. In the matter of topping and lifting from the soil, for example, the English manufacturers advertise an implement which reports say is a real labor saving machine. It is simple, and ought to be cheap. Some of our enterprising dealers night either import the implement or adopt the principles involved. It serves for other roots as well. By its use eight | Fare to St Louis ... seres can be topped and pulled per day, requiring the labor of one man and a horse. By comparing several statements, we find the average cost of production to be less than twenty cents per bushel. By improved methods of cultivation and intelligent use of manures this can doubtless be reduced one-half. It is the testimony of those who have tried it, that turnips are worth at least twenty-five seems per bushel for fodder. In the vicinity of cities and manufacturing villages in New England we have known them them to often bring seventy-five cents per bushel, and sometimes as high as a dollar, for table use. If it pays to feed grain to young and fatting stock it will certainly pay as well to feed turnips, with less grain.
